POETRY.
The Growing Old.
The following and beautiful stanzas first appeared in the Andover Advertiser, and were written, as we happen to know, by a lady of New York City. However it may be with the frail physical frame, the heart is never "growing old."

I'm growing old—'tis surely so;
And yet how short it seems,
Since I was but a sportive child, Enjoying childish dreams!

I cannot see the change that comes With such an even pace, I mark not when the wrinkles fall Upon my fading face.

I know I'm old, and yet my heart Is just as young and gay
As ever it was before my locks
Grew brown and gray.

I never waned with purer joy Than when the clouds and glowing skies, While glistening tears of rapture fell Told me of my olden days.

And when I mark the check, where once The bright rose used to glow, I grieve me not to see instead The almond crown my brow.

I've seen the flower grow old and pale,
And withered more than I, I've seen it lose its every charm, Then drop away and die.

And then I've seen it rise again, Bright as the morning sky,
And glowing with pure and beautiful And yet so short its life.

Then when I'm growing old—My heart is young and gay
As ever it was before my locks
Grew brown and gray.

I love to see the sun go down, And watch the shadows fall Along the ground, and wonder my heart The clouds in crimson glow.

I see beyond those gorgeous clouds A canopy bright and fair, Where angels sing and the Lamb His light and beauty wear.

I seem to hear the sweetest song Reverberate through the air, And my heart leaps to join the throng To praise the Heavenly King.

position it had assumed, and the keen searching glance of the Sultan, with one resolute and troubled. Although his eyes became steady, while it knifed into an expression of moral sublimity, and though his lips quivered with indelible emotion, he answered, in unflinching accents: "I do."

For a moment, Amurath was silent, for there was a power in intellect proudly resting on its strength, for support undimmed and alone, to whose sovereignty the basest despot is compelled to bow. But the momentary awe was succeeded by a gust of stern passion.

"Had I dared thou, thus avow thy league with treachery? Then, when I have returned to my bosom, when I have drawn near my throne, and ceased even to my right my throne? Tell me the name of him who has permeated this sedition, secret, or, by the sweath of the Prophet, every drop of false heart's blood shall be spilt to expiate thy crime!"

"I have formed no league with treason!" exclaimed the unshaken Selim. "Still, I am in my allegiance to my royal master, I boldly assert my right to that confidence which I have never justly forfeited. Drain the last drop, if it be thy sovereign will, from this faithful heart, and in my dying agonies I will only remember that thou wert once just to thyself and me."

"I demand the proof of thy fidelity," repeated the Sultan. In an instant Selim's hand began to quiver, to yield to the overwhelming influence of his favorite. "Tell me the author of those fatal lies!"

Selim answered not, but bending one knee to the ground, bowed his head in the attitude of grateful humility.

"Commander of the Faithful bid me not expose an unfortunate and misguided being to the fate which he merits. I once knew him, who has thus clandestinely infringed himself on my notice, but years have passed since we have met, and every bond which once united us has long been broken. Beware, since it is not an easy matter to discover an obscure individual, that he is guilty of thy charge, or secretly to perjure. There is a powerful existing party in favor of the fidelity of Selim, and were it once known, that an offspring of that race was still left behind, it would be the signal for massacre and blood. Destroy this traitor's elements are all in my bosom.
My life shall be the pledge of my fidelity—It is in thy hands. I will not receive it by the sacrifice of another, even to thy advantage."

"Take back thy pledge," replied the Sultan, "nothing thy secret to thy breast, but never shall thy lips be celebrated with the beautiful language of Heaven till thou hast unravelled this dark conspiracy, and discovered the pretended offspring of that race, which was created only to serve as the footstool of my glory. The master was to have been slain, and the prince of thy race, but never shall that sunrise shall illuminate the hymenal rite, till thou hast rolled away the shadow from thy name, and fulfilled the demands of the insulted lord."

Selim found himself alone. But before he penetrated into the recesses of his soul, agitated as it was with conflicting passions, he will give an explanation of the proceeding scene.

Amurath had intercepted an anonymous letter to Selim, whose contents were calculated to arouse the strongest suspicions and the darkest feelings. The language of this epistle was bold and open.
It called upon Selim to unite himself to the band which was engaged to restore the ancient throne of the Sultan. It spoke of the existence of a princess, a daughter of the murdered Sultan, who had been sheltered since infancy from the power of the usurper, and whom they had sworn to protect with their blood. Selim recognized in this daring appeal the characters of his elder brother, who, according to the traditions of his own country, had been slain by Amurath, and in the possession of all that loyalty and in the preservation of all that love and duty. He now stood dazzled and alone, conscious of the abyss which yawned before him, for he knew but too well that the wrath of sovereignty succeeding his suicide was as the thunderbolt darting from the cloudy sky.

He might have denied all knowledge of the traitor conspirator who had perished his life and home, but his truth-telling lips were sealed to utter even an untruthful word. He had pledged his fidelity to Amurath, he was bound to him by every tie of gratitude and honor—ties indissoluble and he was united to his brother by the holy bond of fraternity. To Zarah, the faithful, the confiding Zarah, by all those hopes and dreams, even his own life, he would not have sacrificed. He was bound with the very life chords of his existence. Could he throw off his allegiance to the ruthless usurper, yet would he be a traitor, who had elevated him to his present altitude of greatness, and brand himself with the name of traitor and ingrate? Never could he with an undimmed flame than live to bear a stigma so degrading as to have sacrificed his brother to the execution of Amurath, who would search through his kingdom to discover the place of his retreat, were he once assured of his rebellious purposes? Never! Nature would disown him, and he would violate his sacred law. Could he persist in his present course, and would by his desertion, that tender and innocent heart, which beat to adore him? To this there was but one reply, involving life or death.

These reflections pursued him at the midnight hour, while he wandered in the solitude of the liberal of nature and the splendor of art had embellished with every charm. Groves of orange trees, covered with their sweet, waxen, white blossoms, filled the air with that sweet, delicious fragrance, which reminds one of all that is lovely in the moral and spiritual world. Fountains of the purest water tossed their silvery foam to the moon's glancing rays, or flowed on in marble channels, with low murmuring melody, through low arches of dark luxuriance, till their sound distinguished him in early youth, and gained him the appellation of Selim the Proud.

The spot which had been selected was one which nature had guarded from intrusion with the most jealous care. On one side a cluster of trees, clothed in the dense foliage, presented a wall of verdure impenetrable to the eye on the other, a broad stream, darkened by the boughs which overshadowed its banks, poured its tributary waters into the Euphrates' distant waves.

Selim impatiently demanded of his brother the credentials which he had promised to deliver. Selim drew from beneath his secret vest, and displayed its brilliant contents. It was filled with the richest gems, but there were papers concealed in this magnificent bed of diamonds which Selim gazed upon, regardless of the splendor which surrounded them. From these papers he discovered that Zarah, his tried brother, the supposed daughter of Zarah, was the orphan princess who had been rescued in infancy from the power of Amurath. He, whose attachment to his murdered sovereign had led him to protect this lone blossom from the storm which had uprooted the parent stem, placed her in the arms of Ibrahim's gentle wife, who was reaching to his cradle, and her name became Selim. Ibrahim was then absent, but he vowed to cherish with a mother's tenderness the innocent being committed to her care. In the meantime, by a mysterious disposition of Heaven her own child sickness and died, and when Ibrahim who had attended himself to the new dynasty, returned, he received to his bosom, with a kindly love, the lovely offspring of a kindly heart. There was an inexplicable resemblance between the two infants, and the wife of Ibrahim justly deemed that her husband would be secured from such solitude and danger, if he remained ignorant of the hazardous charge she had accepted. She was now on her knees, and they who now stood side by side, in the solitude we have described, were the sole possessors of this interesting secret.

Selim grasped the tablet as if it contained his salvation, and exclaimed: "Mine be the honor to guard these sacred testimonials! I have not feared their safety, even in my own hands. I shall Amurath's dream of our country, with the object of this, I will be the instant sacrifice. I have no other life but this, and my only duty is to the watch, to every part of his kingdom, to discover the traitor."

"No! they shall be a pledge between thee and me," exclaimed Selim. "Thou hast sworn not to let me lay my hand on my sword. My life and that of my brave brother are in thy power. I have revealed to thee our most secret designs—thou, the favorite of a tyrant! What surety hast thou given? Nothing but breath, already molten in air. Shouldst thou yield to the weakness of passion, and delivered into the hands of him by whom thou art thyself enslaved, thy Zarah's fate would be sealed. Thy broken faith. I have brought down here, that thy mightiest learn the secret of Zarah's birth; but never, never will I relinquish to the hand of a tyrant, the treasure which expiring loyalty committed to my trust."

He ceased, and suddenly snatching the tablet from the hand of Selim, rushed and plunged into the stream, he called near the spot where they stood. The action was so sudden and impetuous, that Selim was hardly conscious of the deed, till he saw his brother severing the waters with one hand, while the other tremblingly held the tablet. Soon springing upon the opposite bank, he waved a parting sign and disappeared in the obscurity of the night. Selim gazed after this wild and singular action with feelings it would be difficult to define, but the conviction that Zarah depended the species of honor which would lead him to Amurath, stung him to the soul.

"No! no! no!" he bitterly cried, but his resolution of Zarah and the anguish which surrounded her soon banished every other reflection.

The sun was just beginning to gild the mist which curled around the mountain's base—that sun which was to have shown upon their faithful vows. The fear that Amurath might discover the secret of her birth, and the knowledge of the treachery of his brother, as he thought of the almost limitless power which the Sultan exercised over the solid minions which surrounded his throne. He could not believe that the knowledge of so important a fact was confined to the bosom of one individual. He determined to seek the dwelling of Ibrahim, and, warning him of the impending danger, to urge him to leave the country, and bear his daughter to some distant region, where they might remain in security till the apprehended danger was past.

Horrible Wreck.—The New York Tribune gives a shocking picture of the scene at the wreck of the brig Emeline, on the Jersey coast, near Sandy Hook.
The vessel was in distress, and was run ashore to save the lives of the captain and crew. She was seen approaching the beach, where a crowd of wreckers and others were gathered to witness the catastrophe. The crew of the crew could be seen, pale and ghastly, and as she struck, every man cried, "God help us!" But they clung to the rigging as the vessel dashed over. She lay about 80 yards from shore. The main-mast was about half gone, and the six men on board got under the fore-mast, and were, for a time, saved from the storm. They must have been frozen until they were too weak for exertion, as they did not launch their boat. The mortar was placed on shore and five lines shot from it in succession, all of which bedged in the rigging of the vessel, but the feeble and worn-out sailors were unable to reach it. Soon the main-mast gave way, and being then exposed to the full fury of the storm, with the sea sweeping the deck, some of the doomed men took to the rigging, while others went into the cabin.
One attempted to save himself by throwing overboard the top of the gallery and jumping after it, but after struggling heavily for 15 minutes, was drowned by coming under the short mast. The three men who went into the cabin were not seen again. The two remaining men above were forced to death in the rigging.
On Monday, the fog broke in two, and the fragments drove ashore. She was a Yankee craft, but owned in New York, which she could not fathom them. He saw only the bold, unquiet eye, the proud, curling lip, and haughty mien, which had dis-

POETRY.
Thou'lt miss me evermore,
By ANNE MARIA WELBY.
Thou'lt miss me, fairer forms than mine May on thy pathway beam, And eyes of laughter in thine With love's own softness gleam, But ever from their happier rays Thy spirit's glance will steal Back to the one sad, earnest gaze So filled with love for thee.

The Crazy Engineer.

FROM THE REPORT OF A RECUSSION CONDUCTOR.

My train left Danville, in the morning, generally at 8 o'clock, but once a week we had to wait for the arrival of the steamer from Stockholm. It was on the morning of the steamer's arrival that I came down from my hotel and my engineer had been so seriously injured that he could not run. One of the railroad engineers had run over him and broken one of his legs. I went immediately to the engine house to obtain another engineer, for I knew there were three or four in the reserve there; but I was disappointed. I enquired for Westphal, and was informed that he had gone to Steegen to visit his mother. Gendolph had been sent to Koenigsburg, on that road. But where was Maine? He had left of absence for two days, and had gone, no one knew whither.

"There was a fix," I heard the puffing of the steamer in the Neufahrwasser, and the passengers would be in fifteen minutes. I ran to the guard and asked them if they knew where there was an engineer; but they did not. I then went to the firemen, and asked if any of them felt competent to run the engine to Danville; not one of them dare attempt it. The distance was nearly one hundred miles. What was to be done?

The steamer came to her wharf, and those going on by rail soon came flocking to the station. They had taken breakfast on board the boat, and were all ready for a fresh start. The baggage was checked and registered, the tickets bought, the different carriages pointed out to the various classes of passengers, and all were seated. The train was in readiness in the long station house, and the engine was steaming and puffing away impatiently in the distant firing house.

"Come why don't we start?" growled an old fat Swede, who had been watching me narrowly for the last fifteen minutes. And upon this there was a general chorus of anxious inquiry, which soon settled into downy murmuring. At this juncture some one touched me slightly on the elbow. I turned and saw a stranger by my side. I expected he was going to remonstrate with me for my backwardness. In fact, I began to have strong temptations to pull off my uniform, for every anxious eye was fixed upon the glaring badges which marked me as the chief official of the train.

However, the stranger was a middle-aged man, full and stout, with a face expressive of great energy and intelligence. His eyes were black and brilliant that I could not for the soul of me gaze steadily into it; and his lips, which were very thin, seemed more like polished marble than human flesh. His dress was of black throughout, and not only fitted with exact neatness, but was scrupulously clean and new.

"You want an engineer, I understand," he said, in a low, cautious tone, at the same time gazing quietly at him, as though he wanted no one else to hear what he said.

"I do," I replied. "My train is ready, and we have no engineer within twenty miles from here."

"Well, sir, I am going to Danville—I must go—and if you can find none other, I will run the engine for you."

"Ha! I understood, are you an engineer?" I am, sir—one of the oldest in the country; and now on my way to Berlin to make arrangements for a great improvement I have invented in the application of steam locomotion. My name is Martin Kroll. If you wish, I will run you as far as Danville, and I will show you running that is running."

Was I not fortunate? I determined to accept the man's offer at once, and so I told him. He received my answer with a nod and smile, and then proposed to go and get the engine. I went with him to the house, where we found the iron horse in charge of the fireman, and all ready for the start. Kroll got upon the platform, and I followed. I had never seen a man betray a more peculiar anxiety among the machinery than he did. He sat on the steam in an instant, but with care and judgment, and he backed up the baggage carriage with the most exact nicety. I had seen enough to assure me that he was thoroughly acquainted with the business, and I felt composed once more. I gave the engine up to my new man, and then hastened away to the office. The word was passed for all passengers to take their seats, and soon after I waved my hand to the engineer. There was a puff, a groaning of the heavy axles, and a trembling of the building, and the train was in motion. I looked upon the platform of the guard carriage, and in a few moments more the station-house was left behind us.

In less than an hour we reached Dirshan, where we took up the passengers that had come in on the Koenigsburg railroad. Here I went forward and asked Kroll how he liked the engine. He replied that he liked it very much.

"But," he added, with a strange sparkling of the eye, "wait until you get my improvement, and then you shall see traveling. By the soul of the Virgin Mother, sir, I could run an engine to fear from the passengers."

"Good heavens!" cried one of the guard, coming down, "look, sir, and see how we are going!"

I looked out of the window and found that we were dashing along at a speed never before excelled on that road. Posts, fences, rocks and trees flew by in undistinguishable masses, and the carriages now swayed fearfully. I arose to my feet, and met a passenger upon the platform. He was one of the chief owners of the road, and was just on his way to Berlin; He was pale and excited.

"Sir," he gasped, "is Martin Kroll on the engine?"

"Yes," I told him.

"Holy Virgin! Don't you know him?" "Know him?" I repeated, somewhat puzzled. "What do you mean? He told me his name was Martin Kroll, and that he was an engineer. We had no one to run the engine, and—"

"You took him!" interrupted the man, "Good heavens, sir, he is as crazy as a man can be! He turned his brain over a new plan for applying steam power. I saw him at the station but didn't recognize him then, as I was in a hurry. Just now one of the passengers told me that your engineers were all gone this morning, and that you found one who was a stranger to you. Then I knew that the man whom I had seen was Martin Kroll! He has escaped from the hospital at Steetin. You must get him off somehow."

The whole fearful truth was now opened to me. The speed of the train was increasing each moment and I knew that a few miles more per hour would surely launch us all into destruction. I called to the guard, and then went forward as quickly as possible. I reached the after platform of the tender, and there stood Kroll upon the engine board, his hat and coat off, his long black hair floating wildly in the wind, his shirt unbuttoned at the throat, his sleeves rolled up, with a pistol in his teeth, and thus glaring upon the fireman who lay motionless upon the fuel. The furnace was stifled till the very latch of the door was red hot, and the whole engine quivering and swaying as though it would shiver to pieces.

"Kroll! Kroll!" I cried at the top of my voice. The crazy engineer started and caught the pistol in his hand. Oh! how those great black eyes glared, and how ghastly and frightful the face looked.

"Ha! ha! ha!" he yelled demagogically, glaring upon me like a roused lion. "They swore I could not make it. I made it, and when 'twas done they stole it from me. But I've found it. For years I've wandered in search of my great engine, and they swore it was not made. But I've found it. I knew it when I saw it this morning at Danville, and I was determined to have it. He! he! he! we're off to the moon, I say. By the Virgin Mother, we'll be in the moon in four-and-twenty hours! Down, down, villain!—If you move I will shoot you!"

This last was spoken to the poor fireman, who at that moment attempted to rise, and the frightened man shrunk back again.

But even as he spoke the buildings were at hand. A chicken-like sensation settled upon my heart, for I supposed we were gone now. The houses flew by like lightning. I knew that if the officers had turned the switch as usual we should be hurled into eternity in one fearful crash. I saw a flash—it was another engine! I closed my eyes, but still we thundered on. The officers had seen our speed, and knowing that we could not hand up in that distance, they had changed the switch so that we kept on.

But there was still death ahead if we did not stop. Only fifteen miles ahead was the town of Schwetz, on the Vienna, and the entrance near the bank of the river, was a short curve in the road. At the rate we were now going we would be there in a few minutes, for each minute carried us over a mile.

The shrieks of the passengers now arose above the crash of the rails, and more terrible than all else arose the desperate yell of the mad engineer.

"Martin! Martin!" I cried, the guardman's voice not a moment's time to be lost—Schwetz is close by. If you do not stop, I'll go myself," he added. "Let's shoot him!"

At that moment a tall German stevedore came over to the platform, where we stood, and when he saw the mad man had his pistol aimed at him, he grasped a heavy stick of wood from the tender, and with a steadiness of nerve which I could not have commanded, hurled it with such force and precision that he knocked the pistol from the man's grasp. I saw the movement, and on the instant that the pistol fell I sprang forward, and the German followed me. I grasped the man by the arm, but I should have been a mere insect in his power had I been alone. He would have hurled me from the platform had not the student at that moment struck him with a stick of wood, which he had caught as he came over the tender.

Kroll settled down like a dead man, and on the next instant I shot off the engine with the greatest care. As the freed steam shrieked and howled in its escape the speed of the train decreased, and in a few moments more the danger was passed, and as I settled back, entirely overcome by the wild emotions that had agitated within me, we began to turn the curve by the river, and before I was fully recovered the fireman had stopped the train in the station house at Schwetz.

Martin Kroll, still insensible, was taken from the platform, and as we carried him into the guard room, one of the guard recognized him, and told us that he had seen him there about two weeks before.

"He came," said the guard, "and swore that an engine which stood near him was his. He said it was one he had made to go to the moon in, and that it had been stolen from him. We went there for help to arrest him, and he fled, with his hands approaching me in the same way. But he was more cautious at Danville."

At Schwetz we found an engineer to run the engine to Danville, and having taken out the western mail for the northern train to take along we saw that Kroll would be properly attended to, and then started on.

The rest of the trip was run in safety, though I could see that the passengers were not wholly at ease, until they were entirely clear of the railroad. A heavy purse was made up by them for the German student, and he accepted it with much gratitude; and I was glad of it, for the current of their gratitude to him may have prevented a far different current which might have been poured upon my head for engaging a madman to run a railroad train.

But this is not the end. Martin Kroll remained insensible from the effects of that blow upon the head nearly two weeks, and when he recovered from that he was sound in mind again. His insanity was all gone. I saw him about three weeks afterward, but he had no recollection of the past. He remembered nothing of the past year—not even his mad freak on my engine.

But I remembered it, and I remember it still, and people need never fear that I shall ever be imposed upon again by a crazy engineer.

A New Post Office has been established on the route from Jacksonville to Asheville, on the Green's Ferry road 13 miles west of Jacksonville, called Peck's Mill, and J. P. Goss Esq. appointed Post Master.

A New Post Office has been established on the Circular route from Jacksonville to the eastern side of this county. The office is called Watts Creek, and Joseph DeFreese, Esq. has been appointed Post Master.

Col. Wm. F. Samford.—We published in our paper of the 4th inst. a card from this gentleman, in relation to the candidacy for Governor, which we understood to mean that he declined being a candidate for that office, and that his name would never even come before the convention. But it now appears from the True Union, published in the county of his residence, that we were mistaken in that inference. That paper says he merely "declines a struggle for office," that his friends do not construe it otherwise, and that if selected by the Convention he will bear his banner proudly, and if victorious wear his laurels as he deserves the honor and dignity of Alabama.

It appears that the Advertiser and Gazette placed the same construction upon Col. Samford's card, and we believe the same error that we were and we think it probable that they will also make the same error. But we very clearly stand corrected, and emphatically repeat the expression of our opinion contained in our brief comment, with the assurance that if nominated by the Convention we will yield him a most hearty and warm support.

The Terrible New York Tragedy.—We have not room for the further particulars and details of the recent murder of Dr. Burdell, in New York since our account of which was given in our last paper. It has created more excitement than any murder since that of Dr. Parkman, in Boston. Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Ebel, and Mr. Burdell have been arrested, and it appears in the progress of the investigation, that Mr. Burdell, the physician, was privately married to Mrs. Cunningham, and the testimony goes to show that Ebel probably personated Burdell in that affair. It further appears that Dr. Burdell was never married before, and that he was a brother of his who figured in a divorce case some years ago. One witness testified that Burdell expressed fears a marriage that Mrs. Cunningham and Ebel would associate him and another, Mary Deaton, a claimant left the house the evening before the murder, testified to Burdell's firm good conduct and habits, and stated that he had recently been treated with great rudeness by Mrs. C. and Ebel. The police it is stated, found a bloody dagger and loaded revolver in one of Mrs. Cunningham's bureau drawers, and that upon being informed of it, she became greatly agitated, fell back in her chair and groaned. There are some of the principal points developed in the investigation, but there are others, that still involve the affair in great mystery.

A later dispatch says Mrs. Cunningham has confessed that she stabbed Dr. Burdell to death while Ebel held him. It thus proves true it will end both the investigation and the mystery.

The last statement has not been confirmed.

Alabama Educational Journal.—The 2nd number of this truly valuable publication is now ready for distribution, and fully sustains its interest and beauty of typographical execution, the promise of its predecessor.

It is edited by Mr. Wm. F. Perry, state superintendent of Public schools, who has thus far proven himself to be an able editor, and to possess peculiar aptitude for usefulness in this department of literature.

Augusta Ga.—The House of Representatives has passed a bill making this thriving and enterprising city a port of delivery, and no doubt is entertained of its passage by the Senate. This will be a great advantage to the business men of that city, as the hard ware dealers alone pay about $30,000 in duties annually and its dealers in crockery and china $20,000, besides the large amounts paid by importers of wines, liquors, and cigars.

While on this subject, as the season for spring business is approaching, we will renew our call of attention to the cards of a number of business houses in Augusta, to be found on the first page of this paper. Haviland, Risley & Co. Druggists. Baker & Caswell, Grocery and commission Merchants.

Holman & Curtis importers of China, Glass and Earthenware.

G. W. Ferry dealer in Hats, Caps, Bonnets, Umbrellas and straw Goods.

G. A. Oats & Co's Piano, Book and Music Depot.

J. H. Service's Augusta seed store.

These gentlemen offer to dispose of Goods in their line at Charleston prices and offer for inducements to wholesale purchasers equal to the time, and additional expense of travel and freight from that city.

We invite attention to the card of W. J. and E. C. Johnson, in an other column. These gentlemen are prepared to execute in the neatest and most durable manner, all kinds of clock and watch work, and repairing of Jewelry. They have also on hand a considerable stock of fine watches and jewelry, which they intend to increase in a short time; and we presume we need only suggest to persons who may wish to purchase articles in that line, that it is safer and more reliable to purchase from those who are judges of the articles and who deal exclusively in them; and those too, who will ensure their articles to be what they represent.

Mail Contracts.—Persons who may wish to bid for contracts to carry the mails, will find it in their interest to consult the advertiser in another column, for receiving proposals until 21st. March next, to carry the mails on the various routes mentioned for one year from the 1st of July next.

Cotton—A bid for 137 bales in Charleston on the 13th inst. and prices very firm.

The communication on the subject of the Coosa and Chattahoochee River Rail Road, signed "Walker" shall appear in our next paper.

Sewing Machines.—See advertisement of Rev. John Wilmer, Agent for the sale of Wheeler and Wilson's Sewing Machines. These machines, for family use, are thought to be superior to any ever invented. One of them is in use in the house of the proprietor of this paper and also that of Wm. H. Fleming, Esq. and may be seen in operation at any time.

St. Petersburg Russia.—We extract the following from a letter to the Sun, which will be quite interesting, particularly the account of the great works of the Messrs. Winans, of Baltimore:

"St. Petersburg is the most magnificent place I have visited in the Old World, and as regards the architectural capacity of the Russians—if I may judge from the perfect symmetry of their public and private buildings—they cannot be surpassed anywhere. This place, as you are aware, is comparatively a new city, having been founded only a short time in and named of Baltimore.—It was laid out in 1702, and is located on a beautiful plain; the streets, being nearly level and crossing each other at right angles, are by far the widest of any European city I have visited. A stranger need have no fear of being lost here, or requiring the services of a guide, as it is so often the case in other cities. The public buildings here surpass anything of the sort in the United States, and I cannot see how they could be excelled anywhere. The imperial palace is situated in the centre of the city, covering some twenty acres, and contains 1,151 rooms, many of which are of great dimensions. I visited the imperial picture gallery and was much gratified by the display of art here exhibited. I visited this collection of paintings in the most valuable in the world. The building devoted to the offices of the marine department is of great magnitude, containing a front of over 2,000 feet, and is situated in a line with the palace, and from the summer garden. For architectural beauty it is no superior. The military academy of fine arts and hospital are all on a scale of grandeur which to an American, appear truly surprising. I visited the immense machine shops of the Messrs. Winans, and was much gratified to find that they are located on the Neva, about six miles from this city. I found they were extensively engaged in building locomotives, cars, casting of cannon, and making a variety of machinery for the government. You can form some idea of their operations when I state that they employ some 4,000 operatives. The most perfect system which they adopt renders it extremely pleasant to spend a few hours in their establishment. Everything seems to move as regularly as their machinery. The locomotives and cars which I examined of their manufacture really caused me to feel proud that our great city of Baltimore was so well and ably represented here, they being Baltimoreans. I found Mr. William L. Winans, our Consul, always ready and willing to render aid to Americans.—If all the consuls of our government would take but half the pains to assist Americans as Mr. William L. Winans does, there would be no cause of complaint for the want of attention. He is a gentleman. Through his influence I mainly attribute my success in procuring a contract with the Russian government to raise the ships which were sunk during the war, in the roadstead of Sebastopol. I expect to be in Baltimore by 18th February, to arrange for the work of raising during the summer, the ships of war which I have contracted to do."

Terrible Freshets at the North.—Albany February 9.—A tremendous flood occurred here last night in consequence of the recent thaw, causing an immense amount of damage to property. The loss is estimated at $2,000,000.

The city during the night has been the scene of the utmost confusion owing to the combined evils of fire and flood, a fire having broken out whilst the flood was at its height.

The city of Troy is nearly overflowed and the bridges in the neighborhood are in danger. One bridge from up the River floated down against the Troy bridge this morning.

The freight Depot at Green Island has been burnt by slacking lime.

The trains are all suspended and business is entirely stopped.

Harrisburg, Feb. 9.—The flood on the Susquehanna is tremendous. The ice moved but gorged four miles below here, and blocks of ice are now piled up on the Railroad track 10 to 15 feet high, so that the trains are suspended both ways.

It is reported that a couple of bridges on the Juniata have been swept away with several piers of the Cumberland Valley bridge.

An awful destruction of property seems to be threatened along the line of the Susquehanna.

Presses and Cotton Bales.—Mount, Feb. 11.—The Planter's, Hunter's and Montgomery Cotton Presses in this city have been destroyed by fire. About fifteen thousand bales of cotton were also burnt.

Asheville, N. C. Fair.—We are requested to state, that a Convention will be held in Asheville, N. C. on the 2nd Monday of the Session of the General Court, with a view to nominate Delegates to the gubernatorial and District Conventions. Jacksonville papers will please copy.

The Buried Murder Case.—New York, Feb. 11.—The inquiry is still progressing. Nothing further of importance has been elicited since the evidence of Mr. Ebel, who states that he passed Burdell's house at half past 10 o'clock, and immediately after heard a cry of "murder" and a fall. He stopped to listen, when a man in a long coat opened Burdell's door and ran out, carrying away a parcel pointed out Ebel, who was in the room with others as the man who carried him away. Ebel had passed Burdell's house at half past 10 o'clock, but said nothing.

INDIAN HOSTILITIES IN TEXAS.

The following from the Necees (Texas) valley, of the 24th ult., indicates a most distressing state of affairs in Webb county, Texas:

Lorenzo, Webb Co., Jan. 15, 1857.

The Comanches are all around us in strong force, and the utmost indignation prevails among our citizens that their lives and property should be left exposed by the General and State Governments to the tender mercies of the savages.

The prospects of this part of Texas were excellent till the late withdrawal of the United States mounted troops invited down the murderous attacks of the Comanches. Within a month twelve men have been killed near this, whilst attending to their stock-farms, and a general break up is taking place among our stock farmers in consequence of the outrages still continuing. The mail from Danville is just in, and brought the following notice to the postmaster, accounting for its delay:

From the Savannah Mor. News.

We stated yesterday that Michael Boylan and Philip Martin, had been arrested for the murder of a negro, the slave of the former, named Stepey. An examination had been yesterday before Justices Russell, Hart and Reedy. Doctors Howard, Charlton and Johnson, who made an examination of the deceased, testified that in their opinion the beating inflicted was sufficient to cause death. Several witnesses were examined, the substance of whose testimony was to the following effect: The negro Stepey was a runaway. He was arrested on Wednesday morning by Constable Jones, and taken to Mr. Boylan, his owner, who employed the officer to whip him. Constable Jones gave him some thirty lashes with a riding whip, or a small cowhide. In the afternoon of the same day, several witnesses saw the negro tied by the hands to a tree, and the brisconer Martin beating him with a heavy trace strap.—One witness, Mr. Robert Carry, testified that when he came up to Boylan's place he saw Martin beating the negro in a most cruel manner while Boylan stood at a short distance looking on.

Witnesses remonstrated with Boylan against the inhumanity of the punishment, when the negro was released, fell to the ground speechless and prostrate. Martin ordered him to rise, and afterwards dealt him several blows with a whip while he lay up on the ground insensible. Martin then dragged him from the place into the house, where he died on Thursday morning. Sergeant Wilson of the police having been notified of the murder, repaired to the place and found the negro lying on the floor, his body still warm, and a coffin in readiness for his burial. Returning to the city, he represented the facts to the Solicitor General, who promptly ordered the arrest of Boylan, who was arrested by the officer, who learned from the conversation between Boylan and Martin, that the latter was implicated in the affair, arrested him also. At the close of the testimony the case was submitted without argument to the Magistrate, who committed the prisoners to answer the charge of murder in the Superior Court. John W. Owens, Esq., Counsel for the prisoners.

Justice Reedy dissented from the judgement of the Court, so far as Boylan was concerned.

We will not comment upon a which is soon to come before the proper tribunal for investigation and judgement.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
FOR the rapid cure of Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Asthma and Consumption, is universally known as the best remedy ever discovered for every variety of Pulmonary disease. It is the result of its usefulness and numerous cures of its cures, that almost every section of the country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to require observation, and its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs which are incident to our climate. By its timely use many, nay almost all attacks of disease upon the Lungs or throat, are arrested and thus saved many thousands of persons from the premature grave. No family should be without it, and those who do neglect to provide themselves with a remedy which wards off this dangerous class of diseases will have cause to deplore it when it is too late. Proofs of the surprising efficacy of the Cherry Pectoral need not be given to the American people; they have living proofs in every neighborhood. But those who wish to read the statements of those whose whole health has been restored and whose lives have been saved by its use, will find them in my American Almanac which the agents below named has to furnish gratis for every

THE MONTEVALLO
MALE & FEMALE
INSTITUTES.

OF THE Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

The first Session of the above Institutes, located in the Town of Montevallo, Shelby

The sight that met the eyes of the officers and a neighbor who broke into the room, little expecting what had happened, was the most horrible that could be imagined. The woman lay on the floor in an undress, killed in as brutal a manner as ever witnessed; the blood and brains smearing the boards and walls of the room.

he doors shattered and splintered by the sunderer in his endeavor to keep off those who were outside, and himself standing like an infuriated wild animal, he brand-ished an ax, with which he threatened to kill whoever dared to touch him.

At the inquest held yesterday, by Deputy Coroner Mitchell, all the circumstances that could be gathered were ascertained relative to the murder and the previous acts of Matthe. It appears that some weeks ago he had a difficulty with a Mr. Holrick, a grocer, who lives near him, and whom he assaulted suddenly and very badly.
The case was brought before Recorder Smith, but in the trial he was perjured himself so evidently that the Recorder sent him down and committed him for trial to the First District Court. On Friday evening last he sent for Holrick, intimating that he wished to become reconciled. Hol-rick went to Matthe's house, and was not by his wife, to whom he (H.) was telling he had been sent for by her husband, when Matthe came out rather excitedly, told him to come in, that he had no arms in the place, that he was sorry for what he had done, he knew he was perjured; that he wished to confess that he had sinned before God; he was in good sense then, but no one might know how he would be to-morrow.

After that, nothing occurred to attract attention. He did not go to work on Saturday, but appeared quiet enough. About eight, the children, three daughters, went to bed, leaving their mother making bread and their father walking up and down the room. Between ten and eleven o'clock, a fellow-workman was sitting in his room with his wife, when he heard a noise in Matthe's room, and also heard him say—"If McCallay and his wife are going to take such a stand as that I will cut their heads off."

McCallay, from that time to see what was the matter, and knocked several times at Matthe's door, but got no answer. He was then going to get a watchman, when he heard blows in the room. McCallay, not knowing, but upon returning they could not get in; so the mother went to the door and then they forced the two doors of the room, and saw the terrible state of things within. Matthe was secured, but not without great danger, especially to officer Sullivan, who grasped him first.

The murdered woman was about forty years of age, thin, the chest a boat shape, appear to have been carefully reared and attended to in the best manner.
When Matthe was asked why he did such a deed, he replied it was no matter, no one knew better than himself.

Advertising.—The Albany Territory says that although the advertising rates of the New York Tribune $1 to $150 per line, there are persons—Wide awake, business men, who believe, and know by experience, that advertising is profitable to them—who have from 10 to 300 lines in each of that paper.
The Illinois Central Land Company pay the Tribune from $2,000 to $5,000 annually, & they must think it pays, or they would not continue to do so.

A new counterfeit fifty dollar bill on the Southern Bank of Alabama, has made its appearance. Between the signatures should be a dog, instead of a steamboat, as in the counterfeit.

Singular Fatality.—A singular fatality is related in connection with the late suicide of Hugh Miller, the Geologist, in England. The pistol used by Miller was taken by a friend to the gun smith in order to ascertain how many shots were fired and how many charges remained in the chamber. The foreman of the shop, Thomas Leslie, while looking into the chamber and turning it a round, accidentally let the hammer fall when a charge exploded, and penetrating his head by the right eye, killed him instantly.

"What's the matter, Uncle Jerry?" said Mr. —, as old Jeremiah K. was passing by, growling most ferociously.
"Matter," said the old man; "I've been lugging water all the mornin' for Dr.
C's wife to wash with, and what d'ye cose I got for it?"

"About nippepees,"

"Nippepees," she told me that the doctor would pull a tooth for me sometime."

The importance of privacy as a secret of matrimonial happiness, is thus beautifully described:

Preserve the privacy of your house, marriage state, heart, from father, mother, sister, brother, and all the world. You two with God's help, build your own quiet world; every third or fourth one whom you draw into it with you, will form a party, and stand between you two. That should never be. Promise this to each other. Renew the vow at each temptation. You will find your soul will grow, as it were, together, and at last they will become as one. Ah, if many a young pair had on their wedding day known this secret, how many marriages were happier than, alas! they are.

A Child Born with Tetanus.—The Louisville Courier of the 19th inst. says:
"We alluded, in Saturday's paper, to a woman giving birth to a child which had teeth when born. The woman is named Martha Lee, a native of Washington county, Ind. She stated that she started to Cincinnati on the cars, but at Seymour by mistake took the wrong train and came to Jeffersonville and from thence to this city. She got into some house and stayed a day or so, but the occupant, on finding what was about to occur, rudely and unfeelingly thrust her out into the street. She wandered about until exhausted, and about 10 o'clock at night seated herself at the door of Mr.
Brannan, on the levee, between fifth and sixth streets, who, ascertaining her situation, kindly gave her shelter, where in a few minutes afterwards the child was born. The woman is we understand, entirely destitute. It presents a case worthy of attention of the bureau and charity.

In a recent number of the Houston (Texas) News, it is stated that the present high price of cotton, and the prospect of its still being higher, seems to have enhanced the value of field hands in all parts of Texas we have heard from.
The True Issue says a sale was made in LaGrange, when one good field hand sold for $170, and another for $180.

Rome & Jacksonville Rail Road.

We received the Rome Commercial Advertiser last week, containing an able communication from Mr. E. LeHardy, Civil Engineer, on the subject of Rail Road connection between Dalton and Jacksonville, via Rome; but mislaid the paper before we had time to make extracts or comments. The communication speaks in the most flattering terms of Jacksonville—its inhabitants, position, advantages, &c. We will attend to it as soon as another copy can be provided.

The people of Rome, we learn are more earnest and determined on this subject, than they have ever been heretofore. We confess to the fact of a considerable degree of apathy here, at present on the subject—former failures among other causes; but we hope soon to see this pass off. The expenses incurred in surveys heretofore made, can yet be made available. We learn from G. C. Whitley, Esq. President of the Ala. & Georgia R. R. Co. that it is his intention to attend the convention in Rome, which is to assemble in a short time to give all the information and aid in his power relative to stock subscriptions surveys, &c.

The reader will find a couple of very interesting articles on the first page of to-day's paper on the cotton interest—present and future, from the Charleston Mercury and Washington Union. We rejoice to see the approach of the time when the command of the price of this indispensable staple, will be in the hands of the producer, where it ought to be, and he no longer the victim of speculating tricks. This state of things will render cotton lands the most valuable, and the cotton planter the most independent citizen of the world.

Fire.—The valuable flouring mill of our worthy and enterprising fellow citizen, E. G. Morris, on "Cane Creek" in this country, were consumed by fire, one day last week; supposed to have caught from the heat produced by the friction of some part of the machinery. The loss, in mills and grain we understand, is estimated at about $9,000.

Rail Road Celebration.

The 3rd Thursday in April, is the time, and the east bank of the Coosa, near the rail road the place, agreed upon for the festival, in celebration of the crossing of the river by the Ala. & Tenn. River Rail Road.

The Mississippi Legislature has passed a bill, making it an indictable offense, punishable by fine and imprisonment, to pass foreign bank bills of less denomination than $5 in that State.

The Mormons.—It appears that there has been much suffering, destitution and death, among the emigrating parties of this singular and infatuated people, on the Plains, during the Fall and Winter.

We invite the attention of the traveling public to the change made in the sailing days of the Charleston and Savannah Steamship Lines.

A new Post Office has been established on the Circular route from Jacksonville to the eastern side of this county. The office is called Watts Creek, and Joseph DeFosse, Esq. has been appointed Post Master.

The Jacksonville Republican learns that Hon. S. W. Harris of that district, will not be a candidate for reelection to Congress. In that case, the able and intelligent Factor in the last contest, Col. J. L. McCrory, we hope to see selected by the Democracy to represent the District.

We extract the above from the Huntsville Advocate, not only because it is just tribute to Mr. Curry, but for the further reason, that we believe it is reflective of the opinion and sentiment of a large majority of the voters of this District. The Huntsville Advocate is right—Mr. Curry has nothing of the holiday soldier about him, but has always been found in the front of the battle, with a voice, that above through all the din, clear and inspiring as a trumpet. While he has higher claims than any man in the District to Congressional honors, no one will wear them more gracefully, or render a more efficient service upon that theatre of important duties to which their bestowment would call him.

The people of Rome, we learn are more earnest and determined on this subject, than they have ever been heretofore. We confess to the fact of a considerable degree of apathy here, at present on the subject—former failures among other causes; but we hope soon to see this pass off. The expenses incurred in surveys heretofore made, can yet be made available. We learn from G. C. Whitley, Esq. President of the Ala. & Georgia R. R. Co. that it is his intention to attend the convention in Rome, which is to assemble in a short time to give all the information and aid in his power relative to stock subscriptions surveys, &c.

The reader will find a couple of very interesting articles on the first page of to-day's paper on the cotton interest—present and future, from the Charleston Mercury and Washington Union. We rejoice to see the approach of the time when the command of the price of this indispensable staple, will be in the hands of the producer, where it ought to be, and he no longer the victim of speculating tricks. This state of things will render cotton lands the most valuable, and the cotton planter the most independent citizen of the world.

Fire.—The valuable flouring mill of our worthy and enterprising fellow citizen, E. G. Morris, on "Cane Creek" in this country, were consumed by fire, one day last week; supposed to have caught from the heat produced by the friction of some part of the machinery. The loss, in mills and grain we understand, is estimated at about $9,000.

Rail Road Celebration.

The 3rd Thursday in April, is the time, and the east bank of the Coosa, near the rail road the place, agreed upon for the festival, in celebration of the crossing of the river by the Ala. & Tenn. River Rail Road.

The Mississippi Legislature has passed a bill, making it an indictable offense, punishable by fine and imprisonment, to pass foreign bank bills of less denomination than $5 in that State.

The Mormons.—It appears that there has been much suffering, destitution and death, among the emigrating parties of this singular and infatuated people, on the Plains, during the Fall and Winter.

We invite the attention of the traveling public to the change made in the sailing days of the Charleston and Savannah Steamship Lines.

A new Post Office has been established on the Circular route from Jacksonville to the eastern side of this county. The office is called Watts Creek, and Joseph DeFosse, Esq. has been appointed Post Master.

The Jacksonville Republican learns that Hon. S. W. Harris of that district, will not be a candidate for reelection to Congress. In that case, the able and intelligent Factor in the last contest, Col. J. L. McCrory, we hope to see selected by the Democracy to represent the District.

We extract the above from the Huntsville Advocate, not only because it is just tribute to Mr. Curry, but for the further reason, that we believe it is reflective of the opinion and sentiment of a large majority of the voters of this District. The Huntsville Advocate is right—Mr. Curry has nothing of the holiday soldier about him, but has always been found in the front of the battle, with a voice, that above through all the din, clear and inspiring as a trumpet. While he has higher claims than any man in the District to Congressional honors, no one will wear them more gracefully, or render a more efficient service upon that theatre of important duties to which their bestowment would call him.

Talladega Watchtower.

New York, Feb. 2.—It is rumored that a steamer boarded the Tennessee, outside the Hook, and transferred 2,000 men and cannon, and a large quantity of small arms, munitions of war, &c.

Rome & Jacksonville Rail Road.

We received the Rome Commercial Advertiser last week, containing an able communication from Mr. E. LeHardy, Civil Engineer, on the subject of Rail Road connection between Dalton and Jacksonville, via Rome; but mislaid the paper before we had time to make extracts or comments. The communication speaks in the most flattering terms of Jacksonville—its inhabitants, position, advantages, &c. We will attend to it as soon as another copy can be provided.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
FOR the rapid cure of Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Whooping Cough, Asthma and Consumption, it is universally known as the best remedy ever yet discovered for every variety of Pulmonary disease. So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous the cases of its cures, that almost every section of the country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary system, which are incident to our climate. By its timely use many, nay almost all attacks of disease upon the Lungs or throat, are arrested and thus are saved many thousands every year from the premature grave. No family should be without it, and those who neglect to provide themselves with a remedy which wards off the dangerous class of diseases will have cause to deplore it when it is too late. Proofs of the surprising efficacy of the Cherry Pectoral need not be given to the American people—they have living proofs in every neighborhood. But those who wish to read the statements of those whose lives have been saved by its use, will find them in my American Almanic, which the agents below named has to furnish gratis for every one.

JACKSONVILLE Female Academy.
THE term of the Academic year will commence on the 26th day of January, 1857, and continue 21 weeks.—Pupils preferring to enter school previous to that date, can do so profitably, as there will be no vacation at the close of the present session.
In the management of this School, the grand object of Education,—combining thorough intellectual training with the acquisition of practical knowledge—will be constantly kept in view. No merely mechanical routine of class-exercises will be observed; but the reductions will be conducted so as to require of the pupils reflection and independent investigation, the only means of giving strength and vigor of the mind. As our three-fold nature cannot be harmoniously developed if physical Education be neglected; Physiology will be included in the course of instruction, together with such gymnastic exercises as are calculated to promote physical health and symmetry.
It is regarded as a matter of interest to this community and country, that the Jacksonville Female Academy should become a flourishing, and permanently popular Institution, let it be remembered that this can never be effected without the prompt and hearty co-operation of the friends of Education in this vicinity.

PORTABLE STEAM ENGINES.
THE subscriber respectfully calls the attention of Southern Planters and Mechanics to the Portable Steam Engines, of which he has the Agency in New Orleans. They are so simple in their construction that any negro of ordinary capacity can be taught to run one in a day. For driving light machinery, running cotton gins, plantation saw mills, corn mills, pumping water, steaming hoes, &c., they cannot be excelled. A striking feature of these engines is, that they cost less than would mules or horses, to do the same amount of work.—A pair of horses will readily move them from place to place over any ordinary road. They require no brick work to set them up, but they are all ready to be put in operation, with the exception of a smoke-pipe or chimney. One is kept at work in the subscriber's warehouse every day between 9 and 3 o'clock, and all are invited to call and inspect it. The Planter, especially, should look with pleasure upon the introduction of these Engines, to take the place of horse power in ginning cotton and grinding corn, as the cost of running a 6, 8, or 10 horse Engine is much less per day than the expense of feeding the same number of horses.
